

Notable Alumnus Lecture

Michael Lauzardo, MD '91

Associate Professor of Medicine, UF College of Medicine; Deputy Director, UF Emerging Pathogens Institute

Michael Lauzardo, MD, MSc, an associate professor in the division of infectious diseases and global medicine, has been immersed in public health, teaching and patient care at the UF College of Medicine since 1997. Throughout the pandemic, he has served as the director of UF Health Screen, Test & Protect, an initiative that uses public health guidance and best practices to foster a culture of care while taking steps to help prevent the spread of COVID-19. Trained as an internist and pulmonologist, he has been involved in the clinical care of patients with tuberculosis throughout his career. He currently serves as the director of the CDC-funded Southeastern National Tuberculosis Center at UF and has played a key role with the Florida Department of Health, serving as the director of the Florida TB Physicians Network. He focuses his clinical practice and research on tuberculosis among at-risk populations and participates in various international health activities.

UF COLLEGE OF MEDICINE
ALUMNI WEEKEND

Lessons from the Past: How the Lessons from the Forgotten Plague Can Help Us Recover From COVID-19

October 8, 1-2 p.m.

Register for the Zoom webinar at:
drigator.ufl.edu/aw

UF UNIVERSITY of FLORIDA
College of Medicine